Religious Perspectives - Islam

What is the common thread between the different faiths?

“I think the most common thread that I see is, you don’t have to accept another faith; you have to respect another faith. In other words, if you think about it, all of the whole discussion here was about belief in some being, whether you call him Allah, or Christ, or other names. But, it’s all about belief in some being. And then second that we all shared, was doing good deeds; morally, helping each other, helping the needy and so on and so forth. So, that would be my take that the common thread is to respect other faiths, you don’t have to accept them.”
